1 year of Wordless... — everything is my own original content.

This link includes images of the Northern Lights that occurred on May 10, 2024 taken on a mobile phone, which I used as inspiration for my song Wordless.... I had them in mind when I finished producing the song, and I also let the Dreamers on Instagram help me decide.

I created the song in 2019 when I was teaching myself guitar. It began as tones and feeling — a frequency. I later expanded the art: St. Peter's Church in Norton Disney using the same Northern Lights and an overlay of a personal poem I wrote to connect my guitar with a piano piece called Divine Alignment: From the Same Universe and Wordless... Visualiser. Intentionally released on July 7, 2026, aligning with July 7, 1949, when Walt Disney visited.

This is a permanent link that will remain accessible for 200+ years through Arweave. Only someone with access to this link will be able to view it. I aimed to create something that lasts and cannot be erased, similar to being inscribed in stone and preserved in history.

© 2026 Rachel Rebecca McLuckie. All Rights Reserved.

"Wordless..." is a track I wrote 5 years ago when I was still finding my feet on the guitar. I was experimenting with various sounds and tones, and this one resonated with me. It felt spot on. I aimed to capture the essence of life being a miracle - no words needed.

I wrote a poem not long after, "Sometimes its the person you never saw coming who changes your life forever - becoming the brightest star in your sky - and time could never forget." This resonated and woven the rest of my song together. The idea that "you're born into this world, but you're not of this world" really speaks to me.

Rachel McLuckie
"It's Okay To Dream"
Gold Leaf Sound Records
(Official Visualiser)

Rachel McLuckie
Archives

Original Book Soundtrack

Rachel McLuckie